HISTORY OF THE RED CROSS IN MONTENEGRO

Red Cross of Montenegro was founded in 1875, as a Committee for provision of support to the people fleeing from Herzegovina, only one decade after the foundation of the „Committee of Five“. Red Cross was established out of the need to provide support to children, women and older people who fled from the neighboring Herzegovina where there was a conflict situation. The Committee soon transformed into the Montenegrin Society of the Red Cross, and with the ratification of Geneva convention on wounded in November 17th (29th) 1875, Principality of Montenegro became 22nd member of the International Red Cross/Red Crescent Movement, and Montenegrin Society of the Red Cross became the first Red Cross organization in the Balkans.

As such, the National Society operated as independent organization until 1918, when in 1920, following the state structure, it joined the Kingdom of Montenegrins, Serbs, Croats and Slovenians, becoming part of the Serbian Red Cross.

After this merge, the work of the organization practically ceased until 1924, when the new Zeta Board was established in Cetinje which led to the renewal of its humanitarian activities. With the beginning of the Second World War, the Zeta Board stopped with its work, and the new Red Cross Society for the area of Montenegro and Boka began was established, eventually becoming the part of the Yugoslav Red Cross.
